Hi Lilia,

Thank you for your email. There has been no change in the ODR investigative process over the course of the investigation with respect to sharing information between the parties. ODR shares any substantive information provided by one party with the other party. Sometimes substantive information is conveyed in “cover” emails from a party, and sometimes it is only conveyed in an attachment to an email. If substantive information is only conveyed in an attached document, ODR does not provide the “cover” email to the other party. ODR does not share emails from one party with the other party that raise only procedural questions. You may wish to refer to Question 25 of the Frequently Asked Questions Concerning the Harvard University Sexual and Gender-Based Harassment Policy and Procedures which discusses the sharing of information with the parties.

Best,
Ilissa

Thank you Ilissa and Jessica, I appreciate it. I have a question: I've noticed a shift toward me receiving emails that the Respondent sent to you, and vice versa. Early in the process it seemed that I had the ability to communicate with you all without that information automatically being sent to the Respondent-- or, for example, I would receive documents he sent you, but not other correspondence. I am wondering if you can clarify whether this is a shift that occurred at a particular moment in the process, and if it applies to all communications from here on out? Any clarification would be greatly appreciated.

Best,
Lilia

Hi Lilia,

I am writing to provide you with one email that [REDACTED] submitted to ODR today. This document has been redacted in accordance with the Family Educational Rights and Privacy Act (“FERPA”) to remove all identifying student information. Some information has also been redacted for privacy reasons. If you would like us to provide you verbally with any identifying student information that was redacted, please let me know.

Best,
Jessica
